MUSKOGEE NEGRO REFUSED PARDON IN WRIT ACTION

Habeas Corpus Action Fails to Secure Release of Xenophon Jones.

SEAL NOT ON PAPERS

Oklahoma City Attorneys Try for Release of Jones on Walton Papers.

(By the Associated Press)

EUFULA, Nov. 22.—Application for a writ of habeas corpus filed by attorneys for Xenophon Jones, wealthy Muskogee negro killer, was denied in district court here late yesterday by Judge E. A. Summers of Wagoner, Jones, who is serving a 25-year term in the state penitentiary, based his plea on the fact that an alleged pardon had been issued to him by former Governor J. C. Walton on the day of his suspension from office and had been subsequently voided by M. E. Trapp on becoming acting governor.

A writ was also denied to Ed Warring, convicted at Poteau of the murder of his wife after a sensational trial in which experts testified that they found poison in her viscera.

Judge Summers refused Jones' application on the grounds that the alleged pardon "had not been properly attested or properly authenticated by the secretary of state."

It was indicated that an appeal would be taken to the supreme court.

McALESTER, Nov. 22.—A pardon for Xenophon Jones was presented at the state penitentiary late yesterday by attorneys Moman Prueitt and Orban Patterson of Oklahoma City. It is said to have borne the signature of J. C. Walton as governor but did not bear the official seal of the state nor the attestation of the secretary of state. Warden Townsend refused to honor the order and it was then that the attorneys got into a taxi and made a hurried trip to Eufaula where an effort was made in the court to obtain Jones' release on a writ of habeas corpus. The writ was refused.

No papers for the release of Ed Warring were presented at the penitentiary and the action of habeas corpus was a plea to have Warring released on the revoking of a commuted time sentence. Walton had refused Warring's sentence from life to a term of six years. The Walton order had been revoked, it was alleged, when Walton found the representations on which the commutation was recommended were fraudulent. It was claimed by pardon and parole officers that records from the files had been altered and a page presented with the application for pardon that was authentic part of the record.

Struggle Evident in Slaying of Woman and Daughter; Start Probe

(By the Associated Press)

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 22.—In a pool of blood with several cuts on the throat and everything about indicating a severe struggle the body of Mrs. Agnes Mudie was found by her husband, a mechanic, when he returned to his home seven miles from here last night.

Beside the body of the mother with her toys strewn about, was the body of the baby daughter Doris who had been struck dead by a blow from a hatchet. As soon as the alarm was given county police called by the husband went to the scene. It was found that the mother and baby had been dead from six to eight hours. Blood hounds failed to take the scent and police declare they have no clue to the slayer.

Continue Search for Missing Bodies in Factory Explosion

NEW IBERIA, La., Nov. 22.—Search continued today for additional bodies in the ruins of the Vida sugar refinery at Loreauville, 10 miles east of here, which was razed late yesterday by a boiler explosion killing at least nine persons and injuring 15 others, five of them probably fatally.

A check up of the refinery's pay rolls disclosed that three employees were unaccounted for and it was feared they had been buried under the debris of the plant which was completely wrecked, causing an estimated loss of $100,000.

YOUNG PRINCE MAY RULE BAVARIA; MONARCHISTS FAVOR RUPPRECHT'S BOY

Prince Albrecht holding his little step-brother, son of the former Princess Antoinette of Belgium.

Prince Albrecht, only surviving son of Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria and his first wife, is now being referred to by Bavarian papers as "the crown prince." There is growing belief that eventually he will become king of an independent Bavarian kingdom. The ill-fated coup of Adolph Hitler's Fascist forces merely halted plans of the Monarchist forces, it is said. The prince's mother was a sister of the Queen of Belgium.

TIGERS TO MEET RANGERS FRIDAY

Conflict Last Obstacle to Annual Battle With Durant Thanksgiving.

Launched on their last trip from the local haunts during the present football season, East Central's Tigers were ready to dispose of their last obstacle to the traditional annual conflict with the Southeastern Savages here on Turkey Day.

Eighteen men boarded an early morning train for Alva where they tangled with the Northwestern Rangers Friday afternoon in the game that paves the way for the conflict with the Durant Savages.

While the Tigers are confident of victory over the Rangers, the confidence is backed by a period of strenuous training and thorough preparedness for the fray.

Through the Ala game Friday, East Central fans may gather a bit of hope on the possible outcome of the annual battle with the traditional rivals here Thanksgiving. Durant sustained a heavy victory over the Rangers, while other games of comparison may be found in the Edmond, Oklahoma City College and Northeastern tilt and under the glare of inspection, East Central may well point with pride to the prospects.

The aerial attack is expected to play a large part in the Tiger offensive in the Friday game. Potts may be kept out of the fray unless his aid is needed in defeating the Rangers. Potts suffered injuries in the last game at Oklahoma City.

OLD REGIME NOW ENDED IN STATE AS TRAPP MOVES

Governor Takes Up Abode in Executive Quarters at State Capitol.

MANY CHANGES MADE

Chiminal Charges of Court
Expected to Grip Walton for His Deed.

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 22.—The new administration took possession of the executive offices at the state capitol today. The doors of the blue room, the reception parlor of the chief executive, were opened for the first time since January. Heavy carpets and three rooms yesterday were cluttered with scattered papers and files discarded when the Walton office personnel withdrew. This morning workmen had taken out flimsy partitions which afforded limited privacy to the former executive's secretary and the governor's advisers and the piles of debris were missing.

In the governor's private office the little brass donkey, the silent mascot of the late leader, was gone. Nor were the framed diplomas, certificates and photographs of J. C. Walton, taken with General Pershing, Billy Sunday and others, any where to be seen.

Possibility that criminal action will be instituted against Walton in connection with his official acts as governor, loomed today.

The district court grand jury here which considered the evidence upon which the deposed governor was convicted and removed from office by the senate court of impeachment, has drawn indictments. It is understood, and will report today to Judge George W. Clark.

Walton himself expecting such action, has made known his intention immediately to surrender and make bond when the expected indictments formally are presented.

The expected indictments, it is predicted in well informed quarters, will charge Walton with diverting public funds to his own use by placing his private chauffeur on the state pay roll and preventing the assembling of a grand jury. Both allegations were included in the eleven impeachment charges on which he was found guilty.

The senate today argued for more than an hour over a resolution by Senator C. B. Leedy of Arnett, providing for an investigation of the state banking department, game and fish department, board of affairs and state land office and finally referred it to the judiciary committee.

The senate made klan legislation a special order for 1:30 o'clock today and adjourned at 11 o'clock until then.

TRAPP SUGGESTS STRICT ECONOMY FOR OKLAHOMA

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 22.—Declaring that Oklahomans have been "paying $1.25 for 40 cents worth of government," Gov. M. E. Trapp let it be known today that he is preparing a message to the state legislature recommending the appointment of committees from both houses to co-operate with him in making a survey of the state government upon which reforms would be based.

The governor declared he intended to see to it that "$1 will buy $1 worth of government."

Trapp announced he had ordered all contracts for state work let on a strict competitive basis and that he did not contemplate summary removal of the state board of affairs or appointive heads of departments.

"Persons who work hard and give the state value received for the money they are paid have nothing to fear," the executive asserted.

SHORN OF GLORY, COOK IS VICTIM OF COURT WRATH

Arctic Explorer Sentenced to Fourteen Years in the Federal Prison.

ASSOCIATES PUNISHED

Stinging Denunciation Given
Sentenced Man by Judge in Case.

(By the Associated Press)

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 22.—Shorn of any glory that might accrue because of his spectacular oil promotions and his colorful adventures in the ice-bound regions of the poles, Dr. Frederick A. Cook paced a cell in the Tarrant county jail today. His last oil promotion, the Petroleum Producers Association, was his undoing.

Late yesterday Dr. Cook was sentenced to 14 years and eight months in the Leavenworth penitentiary by Judge John M. Killits of Toledo, O., who tried the case. Added to the sentence is a fine of $12,000.

The defendant was charged with using the mails to defraud. If he appeals his case he must arrange a bond of $75,000, perhaps the largest ever named in Texas.

Joseph W. Bailey, his senior counsel, said he could not provide the sum demanded and if he could not Dr. Cook must stay in the county jail until his appeal is heard. If he does make it he must remain in jail until the record of the trial is perfected and approved by Judge Killits. This may require several weeks.

In jail with Dr. Cook are thirteen of his former associates. Cook left the court room with the most stinging denunciation ever heard in Texas ringing in his ears. After he had accused Cook of robbing widows, orphans, aged and destitute Judge Killits said:

"Cook, have you no decency at all? Are you not haunted at night by the faces of pitiable figures you have robbed? How can you sleep?"

Known as an Explorer.
Dr. Frederick A. Cook first became internationally known in 1909, when, upon arriving in Copenhagen from a trip into the far north, he announced that he had discovered the North Pole. His story was accepted as true and he was received there with high honors.

Upon returning to this country Dr. Cook published reports of his journey and wide credence was given his narration for some time. Since then his claims have been disputed, and he ultimately was branded as a faker, but in the meantime he was the recipient of many honors. He was made president of the Explorers club, New York, and a member of the Kings County Medical society, the American National Geographical society, the American Ethnological society, the American Alpine Club and lesser organizations.

Dr. Cook was graduated with a degree of doctor from the New York University College of Medicine in 1890 and the following year was appointed surgeon to the Peary Antarctic expedition. Two years later he led a party up the west coast of Greenland, and the next year he explored the south portion of the same island.

In 1897 Dr. Cook was appointed surgeon to the Belgian Antarctic expedition and as a result he received numerous decorations including the Order of Leopold, the gold medals of the Belgian Royal Society and the silver medal of the Belgian Royal Geographical society. Again yielding to the lure of the North, Dr. Cook in 1903, undertook an expedition to reach the summit of Mt. McKinley, the highest point on the American continent, more than 20,000 feet above the sea level. The expedition failed but in 1906 he financed another and this time he claimed to have been successful.

It was three years later that he announced his claim to have reached the North Pole.

Dr. Cook has written voluminously for magazines along the lines of ethnology, anthropology, geography and other sciences from his observations in the Arctic and Antarctic. He was the author of several books, including "Through the First Antarctic Night." In 1913 and 1914 he lectured in this country and in England, but led a life of comparative retirement until he came to Fort Worth in 1919, and went into the oil business.

A Tale of the Flatwoods

"Let 'er alone," he muttered when at a safe distance. "Let 'er think I couldn't find 'er. She'll think if I couldn't the fox can't, and he's her greatest dread right now."

The trees were hardly leaved out enough yet to conceal a man walking carelessly through them, or fully keep back the sun from peeping down through the thick tangle of twigs and coaxed forth flower and grass blade from the quickening mold. The silver sheath of the hickory buds had already burst and sprung wide apart, the delicate green of the crinkled, newborn leaves appearing in sharp contrast to the purple sheen lining the rent scales. The oaks had begun to thrust forth the tender tips of their new foliage, investing the waking forest with a tint of faint grayish red, as if to the infant leaves some trace of the birth blush still clung.

Upon the floor of the woods spring had already spread a carpet of infinite color and design, new and bright and still unsoiled—here a fancy spangled pattern of spring beauties; there a pattern of solid green where the may-apples opened their umbrellas to the light, in readiness to shield the fragile flowers of white wax that were soon to hover beneath their sheltering folds; and, draped over all, a shimmering silver haze, the gracious benediction of the skies.

The man stopped before a crab-apple tree, the buds of which were opened just enough to make one curious to see more of the beautiful mystery folded teasingly away within the protecting scales. Already some bees, pioneers of their tribe, fussed about the aromatic clusters of peeping color, gathering statistics on the season's honey crop.

A breeze stirred the trees, as if the woods were taking a deeper breath. Jack lifted his shoulders and filled his lungs with the nectar-laden air. Warm by the exuberance of life that rustled and quivered and thrilled around him there gushed up within him the jubilate of a man wooed by the genial day into almost primal closeness to nature. He dropped the butt of the gun to the ground, leaning lightly upon it and stood listening to the dull droning of the bees.

A flash of red flamed through the trees and stopped almost directly above his head in the top twigs of a hickory sapling and there swelled out a wild burst of reckless melody that clothed the hickory with music as the opening buds clothed the crab-apple tree with beauty.

"I thought so, ol' warcoat," the man muttered, glancing up. "You know where she is, don't y'u?"

He stepped softly toward the crab-apple tree—the wild song-burst in the hickory ceasing the instant he moved—and peered in through the gnarled limbs and tangled twigs.

Snuggled down among some drifted dead leaves he found it, the treasure that inspired the cardinal's song—a roughly built, deep little nest, and, shining above its edge, a dark glossy crest, some long tail feathers, a short heavy, reddish bill and a round glittering eye, black as a dewberry.

He let the limb he had bent aside swing slowly back into place and stole away.

"Always two," ran his thought—"a pair; mates—it's nature's way. Pheasants and cardinals and folks—they're all the same—though birds and beasts always run true, while folks—sometimes—oh, well—" He walked away toward the west, coming at length to where the uplands ended abruptly in the line of wooded bluffs that fell steeply to the deep and winding scar of Eagle hollow, and the exact point where the double trail had run plainest the day before—a fact that had doubtless brought him just there. He bent a critical look upon the loutish trail; carefully crossed it; stepped out under a clump of haw trees at the very brink of the bluff and stood keenly searching the woods in every direction.

Below him and a short distance farther down the hollow an old deserted cabin of mud-daubed logs squatted against the bluff a few yards back from the Eagle Hollow road. The place had a reputation in the Flatwoods. It was the uncanny hovel of dead Henry Spencer, a woodchopper, who, on a winter night years before, while in a drunken frenzy, had murdered his wife and infant daughter with an ax, then had wandered out half naked and frozen to death in the snow.

What had once been yard and tiny garden was now overrun with weeds so rank that storms and snow could no longer break them down. A fallen oak had but just missed the cabin, and lay so close to one corner that some wild cucumber vines of the season before had crossed to the ruined roof and still hung in brown and dead festoons stretched from the fast decaying clapboards to the fungous warted branches.

A pair of chimney swallows, true prophets of summer, darted in and out of the crumbling chimney. A yellow-hammer loped down out of the woods, lit upon the dry and sounding comb-board and drummed a challenge to all and sundry other yellow-hammers—or was it a love call to his mate in the dead limb of a sycamore down at the creek across the road?

The sound drew the eyes of the man. At the moment one of the swallows rose above the roof. As he followed its flight, the chimney's and gables of the red-roofed cottage, nearly a mile away down the hollow, came unexpectedly within his range of vision. His brows drew together; he gripped the shotgun; turned and strode through the fringing brambles back among the trees.

Half a mile farther up the hollow, at the point where he had left off following the double trail the day before, he picked his way down the rough and stony side of the wooded bluff to the road. He was just in the act of stepping out from the fringing trees to cross it when the soft swish of a bush a short distance above caught his quick ear.

Remembering that sinister face behind the log, he threw the heavy shotgun to instant readiness and stood dead still, his eyes searching every leaf and twig along the hillside.

"You Don't Chance t' Be Mr. Big Jack?"

There came a soft footfall, the bushes swayed, parted, and a young woman stepped out into the comparatively open glade where he stood—a girl that he had never seen, flushed and breathing hard.

She saw him on the instant, and her face went white. She darted in among the bushes again, stopped, came slowly back, stood studying him. He was as closely studying her—plainly, even shabbily dressed; her faded sunbonnet awry; her hair disheveled by the brambles; but, in spite of all, comely, and ruddy with health.

She made a quick effort to adjust the sunbonnet; spared a hasty touch to the disheveled hair and raised her eyes. He noticed they were blue.

"You don't chance t' be Mr.—Big Jack?"

The woodsman studied her from under half closed lids.

"They call me—that—" He raised his eyes a trifle. "And you?"

She glanced uneasily up the hollow and back to his face. Half covertly searching his eyes, she seemed to gather reassurance from the level frankness of them.

"I jowed y'u—must be—" She glanced back at the bushes; drew a step away from them, as if she feared that hands might come out of them and clutch her. "I'm—Jennie Belden—an' I was on the way t'—find you—" Quite evidently much disturbed, she missed the quick lift of the man's shoulders. She glanced again at the bushes, listened a moment, drew a step nearer and lowered her voice.

"You're in dreadful danger, an' I was comin' t' warn y'u. I don't know what y'u've done, but y'u ain't safe a minute. Of course I know y'u hurt brother Loge's hand, but it ain't that, an' there's another man more dangerous than him, an' a—third man more dangerous than both. There was eyes on y'u yisterdy. Ther' ain't none on y'u this mornin'—n'r on me, an' that's why I could slip away—but ther' will be. Stay out o' the woods, an' don't show a light at night, an' don't come out if anybody calls y'u"—she involuntarily glanced up the hollow, shivering, wrung her hands—"an' please, please, don't breathe a word about seein' me! They'd—kill me if they knowed—not even brother Loge could withstand 'em."

She was talking fast, in low and hurried whispers. Apparently she fancied that her words were not making the full impression she wished, for she drew still nearer—so close that Jack could hear the quick purr of her breath.

"You ain't skeered—y'?" She stopped; stood studying him. "But, of course, I don't reckon y'u would be—a man like you. But please b'lieve me, an' heed me. The woods has eyes; the night has knives." She bent her head; she seemed struggling with some inner thought. "That—third man," she muttered, "he waits, an' bides his time, an' when he strikes, he—kills."

She whirled on the instant, like some startled creature of the woods, and was gone. He strode a surprised step after her, even called softly. There came back to him only the low swish of the bushes and the soft fall of receding steps.

Like a shadow the girl—a far wanderer from the Kentucky mountains—had come; like a shadow gone. One moment the swaying bushes had flared forth her face, with its startled eyes, the next moment had swallowed it up.

The woodsman came back to the edge of the road and stood pondering her message—her warning; felt over in his careful way each hurried word; tried to cast them up and arrive at the exact sum total of them. The thought crossed his mind that she might have been wrought up over an imaginary danger; but no, it was real enough that she had dared personal harm to warn him—and her eyes were honest.

That the man who had glowered at him over the log was in some way associated with Loge Belden he had already surmised from the fact that the man had taken up Belden's quarrel at the schoolhouse—besides, his trail had led that way. But the utmost of their combined grievance could hardly warrant such a threat as the mountain girl had plainly hinted. There must be something back of it all—something that cut deeper than gashed hands and sore jaws.

The girl's last muttered words—"that third man" that "waits, an' bides his time, an' when he strikes, he kills"—suddenly assumed a deeper meaning. He darted a quick look down the hollow—a deep scar winding like the trail of a dragon between the hills—where, more than a mile away, hidden from view by the dense woods, the village lay like some hapless creature that had barely escaped the dragon's jaws; then frowned toward the narrow valley's head where the weather-blackened roof of a squat cabin could barely be seen through the trees. A slow sternness crawled into his eyes; he dropped the butt of the shotgun to the leaves; leaned upon it and stood staring down at the road.

Gradually, as he stared, there grew upon him the consciousness of an outline of a single footprint at the other side of the road—detached, alone, apparently with no mark of any kind leading either to it or from it. The singular fact of its seemingly perfect isolation slowly reached him, and won a place among the troop of thoughts that gripped him.

He studied it closely a moment, grunted and then grinned.

"Uncle Nick," he muttered. "Heel deepest—he's jumped—where from?" He glanced at the other side of the road where the take-off must have been to land a leap just there and after a short search found where the old man's boot had scraped the moss a little in making the spring.

"Aimin' fr that slab of sandstone," he chuckled, his eyes losing a mite of their hardness, "fell a bit shy and landed in the soft dirt—mighty good jump, at that, fr a man with eighty-odd years on 'is back."

Stepping again over the isolated footprint, he examined it with closest attention, trying at the same time to call up all the lore of the trail that the old ranger had taken such pride in teaching him—the wise and wonderful ways of woodcraft that he had taken an equal pride in learning, until, next to Uncle Nick himself, he was known to be the most skillful woodsman along the Wabash. As he looked, a grass stem that had been bent down and slightly hung in the soil suddenly loosed and straightened.

"Hot trail, ol' scoutmaster," he muttered, in the half spoken soliloquy that nature sometimes teaches her favorites. "And there y'u go, pickin' y'u'r steps so's t' hit the hard spots and miss the soft ones."

A sudden thoughtfulness crossed his face. "I wonder why y'u're so p'ticular t' hide y'u'r trail, though—there ain't no Pottawatomies t' find it no more. Maybe the woods jist filled y'u s' full this wonderful morning, like they have me, that y'u can't help playin' a while at the ol' war game of the trail. Well, I'll play with y'u—and I'll run y'u down b'fore the shadow of the bluffs climbs out of the creek."

After a searching glance in every direction, so keen and critical that it appeared to handle with minuteness every bush and tree within range of his eye, and a further moment spent in sounding the woods for any false note they might carry, he threw the shotgun into the hollow of his well arm and took up the trail.

It led across the two or three rods of broken ground between the road and the little stream, which, at that point, sparkled along over a shallow riffle. Once, as his old friend had sprung from stone to stone in crossing, his boot had slipped and gone into the water. After that every alternate stone on which he had stepped, was still damp from the wet boot.

Jack had followed to a point well within sight of Loge Belden's cabin when, barely a hundred yards ahead, he caught a glimpse of a man stealing from cover to cover—just a flash as he flitted from one hazel thicket to another, but that was enough. That tall form, erect as an Indian, those iron-gray locks, falling loosely from under the quaint old cap of hand-dressed coonskin, could belong to but one man in the world—Uncle Nick.

Jack instantly darted to cover and began stalking the old ranger. Barely fifty yards separated them when, as he peeped from behind an oak, he saw the old man steal out from a dense thicket of wild grape-vines, dart across an open space and throw himself flat behind a decaying log.

Crawling up behind a huge sugar maple that stood barely more than a rod from the log, Jack rose to his feet, a grin spreading over his face as he thought of the surprise he was about to spring upon his old friend.

He was just bracing himself for the rush when a hand fell upon his shoulder, and, whirling with sudden startlement, he found himself looking with foolish vacancy into the quizzically twinkling eyes of—Uncle Nick.

At sight of his young friend's bewildered face the shoulders of the old hunter shook with merriment, though not a sound passed his lips—the silent laughter that long years in the woods, when they were dangerous, had taught him.

"An' Did Y'u Think t' Take the Ol' Man by Surprize? Did Y'u, Lad?"

"An' did y'u think t' take the ol' man by surprise? Did y'u, lad?"

He opened his mouth in another upheaval of silent merriment, his still sinewy shoulders heaving up and down and jostling his iron-gray locks about his ears.

"Jist bracin' y'urself fr the rush, weren't y'u?"

"I—I—thought y'u was b'hind the log."

The old ranger's eyes danced and his mouth spread wide.

"I was."

"Yes—but how?—w'y I had m' eyes on that log every second."

"Eggsactly"—the sinewy shoulders heaved up and down again—"calculated y'u would. 'Said o' keepin' y'u'r eye on the log, y'u ort 'a' kep' it on the pass to the highest cover—ol' Injin trick—show y'u some time."

The young man glanced at the log, noted the space of practically open ground that must have been crossed in order to reach the nearest cover, and turned to his aged companion in frank admiration.

"Wonder if I ever will be as handy as you?"

"Tain't likely—y'u'r life don't depend on it, like mine use'n to sixty years ago. Y'u're far handier a'ready than any other man in the woods. But woodcraft will never ag'in be what it once'wus. People even kinda wrap down on it, nowdays. They're s' grabbin' an' money graspin' that they think it's a kind of disgrace—some of 'em—t' even larn t' shoot. No, no, woodcraft will never ag'in be what it once'wus—never ag'in."

A faint suspicion of bitterness, of homesickness for scenes long gone—for the stimulating uncertainties of the perilous trail—quivered in the old man's tones. He stooped, plucked off a tender shoot from a sassafras sprout and stood chewing it meditatively.

"How come y'u left y'u'r trail s' open this mornin'?" asked Jack. "I picked it up where y'u jumped the road."

The question seemed to recall the old man's straying thoughts. "Yes, an' y'u ort 'a' picked it up long b'fore. Y'u crossed it twice't b'fore ever y'u come down the bluffs—once't about a hundred yards west o' the pheasant's nest, an' ag'in a leetle no'th of whar y'u stood lookin' down at Hen Spencer's o' cabin. Y'u didn't hardly act like y'u're't this mornin'—y'u acted kinda keener an' fur away, like—so I left the trail open a leetle thar at the road an' at the creek."

The young man turned away and stood gazing out across the brush-tangled hollow.

"An' me thinkin' t' take by surprise the famous ranger that found the trail of the great Tecumseh, when it was hid from the best of the runners," he said warmly—"and you was jist playin' with me."

At reference to the far-famed achievement of his younger days, the shoulders of the old hunter seemed to grow a little more erect, while his dark eyes glowed with a faint suggestion of the fire that in his prime had made them the hardest pair of eyes on the border to pass unseen.

"Well, not jist playin', nuther." He chewed hard on the sassafras sprout a moment. "You must 'a' purt nigh run into that gal a leetle bit ago?"

A statement with the force of a question—the young man started, but hid the movement by fumbling with his sore shoulder. The terrified face of the mountain girl freshened in his mind, with the dread of discovery in his startled eyes. He hitched the blouse loose from his shoulder and glanced out across the hollow without meeting his old friend's look.

"What gal?"

The old man jerked a hand toward the opposite bluff.

"Aw, I jist glimpsed one a-peakin' along through the brush yonder an' lowed mebbe y'u might 'a' run across 'er."

He stood chewing the sassafras shoot and looking away down the hollow in the direction of Black rock. The young man breathed easier—the girl's secret was safe. The hawklike eyes had missed the chance meeting—seemingly the one thing they had missed, as his next words half startlingly disclosed.

"What did y'u make o' them tracks y'u foller'd yisterdy—'om them bushes on the edge o' the cliff back o' y'u'r cabin an' past the ol' log? I see'd y'd be'n foller'n 'em as I crossed the trail m'self this mornin'."

SULPHUR CLEARS ROUGH, RED SKIN

Face, Neck and Arms Easily Made Smooth, Says Specialist.

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles' Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

PROPER TRAINING FOR RURAL TEACHERS AT EAST CENTRAL COLLEGE

The majority of the students of the East Central State Teachers College become teachers in the rural schools of the East Central district. Many of them are rural teachers improving their training while their schools are not in session. Rural schools far outnumber urban schools in this district. The rural school population greatly exceeds the urban. All of these facts and their significance are fully realized by the East Central Teachers College. The administration and faculty know that the biggest part of their work and duty is the proper training of rural teachers.

Insofar as the training of rural teachers requires special instruction, the College is striving to supply it. Many of the college departments offer courses adapted particularly to the needs of those who will teach in the country schools. The elementary courses in psychology and education deal largely with rural problems. Several advanced courses in this department are entirely rural. These include Education 14, Rural School Problems; Education 23, Rural Sociology; and Education 27, County and Rural School Administration and Supervision. Music 3b is designed for teachers in rural schools. History 22 deals with rural economics. The department of Agriculture offers a number of courses which are primarily rural in application. The department of Home Economics often studies how the farm woman can save labor in her household. Courses 19 and 20 in Art devote much time to handwork in the rural school. Courses in Nature Study are of much value to rural teachers. Mathematics 11, Methods of Teaching Arithmetic, purposely adapted to rural conditions to a large extent. In fact, there are few or no departments of the College which do not give more or less special attention to the needs of rural school teachers in their various courses.

In addition to the training provided at the College, a member of the faculty spends most of his time in the field, visiting the rural teachers on their jobs over the district. He carries to them all the help which the College can give through a personal contact of this kind. How much this means to a teacher in the midst of his problems only one so situated can appreciate.

Through the Extension Division of the College, a group of rural teachers can organize a class in almost any subject desired, taught by a properly qualified instructor from their own number. These classes follow outlines prepared by the College faculty, and command college credit. When such classes cannot be formed, the teacher still has the use of the Correspondence Study Department. Through it, he can take his choice of many of the courses offered at the College, and receive full credit when they are completed.

It is expected that in the future a special department of Rural Education under charge of a resident professor, for the specific purpose of looking after the training of rural teachers on the campus, will be provided. This department would employ special critic teachers for rural school practice teaching, and would utilize several typical rural schools in Pontotoc county as practice schools. This would complete an organization which would place East Central among the foremost teachers colleges of the Middle West in rural teacher training.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

GOD'S KINDNESS:—For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee.—Isaiah 54:10.

THE SOUTH FORWARD.

The Manufacturers Record gives figures on the development in the southern states that are astounding. They show where millions of dollars are being spent every month in building cotton mills, power plants, refineries, roads, schools and state or municipal buildings.

The time once was when capital sought investment in the North or Northwest and passed up the South, but now the trend seems to have turned and the South is the land of promise. Seldom does a young fellow leave the South now for greener fields, and by the South we naturally include Oklahoma.

But the half has not yet been told or done. We actually believe that within the next quarter of a century most money seeking investment will come to the South and giant cities and hundreds of industrial centers will result.

The point we want to stress particularly at this time is that the southern towns and cities which expect to reap the most benefit from this capital must be awake and must not overlook any opportunities. This is just a hint of what we must be doing here. Opportunities may come whether we seek them or not, but unless we are awake we may even overlook them when they come.

COOK GETS HIS.

Dr. Cook of North Pole fame and twelve associates have been convicted of using the mails to promote fraudulent oil promotion schemes. An unlucky thirteen.

Not many years ago when Cook announced that he had been to the North Pole he was a world hero until it came out that he was pulling a big hoax. Before that time he claimed to have scaled Mr. McKinley but it later developed that that claim was also bogus. The verdict of the jury in his oil case indicates that he has been up to his old tricks. He should have remembered Lincoln's adage about fooling people.

It is reported that the grand jury in Oklahoma county has returned indictments against ex-Governor Walton. While we do not want to see any one persecuted and do not want any one to be punished unjustly, at the same time we do not want to see Walton freed unless he should be. In other words, the mere fact that he has been mayor of Oklahoma City and governor of the state should not stand in the way of his going to the penitentiary if the evidence is strong enough to convict him.

The Oklahoma legislature has made a good start, but we cannot say the work has been well done until every spot in Oklahoma which is rotten is thrown out and evils corrected. We believe the members of the house committee mean business, and they will come out of the matter with the respect and thanks of the public if they will not attempt to cover up anything. These surgeons should cut and cut as deep as the disease justifies, and they should remember that no body is safe as long as there is infection in any part.

It is a great temptation to boys nearing manhood to leave school when offered jobs that pay fairly well. They need the money and think that perhaps they will be able to return to school later. Often something happens to prevent this and they find themselves facing life only half prepared. It is much better to take a little extra time to sharpen an axe well before going to the woods to work, since one can work much faster with a sharp axe and more than make up for the time spent in putting a keen edge on the blade.

North Dakota is the first state to elect delegates looking to the national conventions next year. The Republicans for the most part sent uninstructed delegates to the state convention, but the Democrats showed a decided preference for McAdoo, his supporters defeating those of Henry Ford by about six to one. This is the first straw in the storm of 1924.

In 1920 both parties nominated Ohio men for the presidency. To date the most outspoken candidates for the two nominations next year are Johnson and McAdoo from California. It is high time the West was given some recognition and California being the farthest west of all would be a very appropriate place to go for a candidate.

It is reported that Victor Bergdoll is willing to return to the United States if granted immunity in the draft dodging case against him. No doubt Bill Haywood would be glad to do the same thing, but the country is getting along very well without either of them.

Although the staff at the state home for narcotic addicts at Arlington have been on the pay roll since July, no patients have yet been admitted. Now it is announced that one from each county will be received. That is not much of a beginning but perhaps the staff in charge will have something to show as a reason for drawing their salaries.

Cooper Breaks Deadlock with Battling Ivey in Winning of Decision in Third Fight here

Battling Ivey, the Wilson gladiator with a growth of beard and a few more tricks in the ring, could not land the blow that would count Archie Cooper among his list of knockouts and Cooper, state middleweight champion, added him to his list of victims by outpointing him in their ten-round engagement at the Convention Hall last night.

From the sound of the first going to the final peal of the fight announcer, Cooper and Ivey battled with brawn and science to break the deadlock in their records.

From the first blow to the last, both men bore up well under the grilling test of strength that counted heavily as the fight grew into the final rounds, failing to slack the mad speed set in the first round, both fighters were waiting for a desirable opening to land the blow that would bring the toll-count often from Referee Ownsby.

Cooper's agility on foot and his ability to sidestep, dodge and convert offense of Ivey into his favor was the only feature that saved Cooper his title in the battle Wednesday night. Blow after blow came from behind a lazy attack of Ivey that would have counted Cooper out had his superior footwork not put him beyond the reach of the attacker. Ivey often sent the power of his heavy body behind a well-directed blow only to have Cooper neatly sidestep and Ivey fall listlessly into the ropes.

Cooper's left jab again proves his most dependable weapon and brought blood from the rugged countenance of the Wilson battler. Ivey's peculiar sledge-hammer right jab proved a menace to Cooper. Cooper started off a merry pace in the third round when he indicated that he was displeased with an apparent low blow and started a mad rush that carried Ivey to the ropes and suffered his body blows that counted heavily in the final rounds of the fray. Ivey uncovered a burst of speed in the eighth round and Cooper was apparently dazzled by the attack but he came back stronger in the ninth and tenth and took both rounds for his.

The decision favoring Cooper was expected by the fans, Cooper having a shade on the offensive and proving the better in footwork.

Referee Irby Ownsby of Shawnee called the decision and his services in the ring were accepted by the fans as well as fighters.

The fight was staged under the auspices of the Ada Athletic club. The preliminary bouts were lively and met with the approval of the fans.

Round One

At the opening of the round Ivey sent in a series of jabs that proving the death of the usual first round caution and feeling out exercise, Ivey leads again with a series of right overhead jabs at Cooper but Cooper returns with left. Ivey again takes the lead in jabbing to the face and body which brings an exchange of blows and a clinch. Cooper misses a swing at Ivey's face and Ivey rushes Cooper to the ropes with a series of hard blows. The fighters again look in a clinch and Cooper misses swing, Ivey's round.

Round Two

Cooper rushes to the middle of the ring at the opening of the round and starts in with a series of his left jabs which Ivey takes at vital points. Cooper and Ivey exchange jabs but Cooper finishes with mean cut to jaw. Cooper again jabs Ivey's jaw but Ivey recovers and rushes Cooper to the ropes. Cooper comes out of close quarters with Ivey with hard fighting. Cooper returns the favor and rushes Ivey to the ropes, where he delivers a body blow that carries its effect and causes Ivey to miss a knockout blow. Ivey sends in three mean jabs before Cooper takes the offensive and leads in the fighting. Both exchange blows and then clinch before the gong is sounded. Cooper's round.

Third Round

Ivey takes a whirlwind lead and lands three effective blows before Cooper returns to the offensive. Cooper again starts working with his left and follows with a terrific right swing to the body. Cooper indicates that he is hit low and starts in with a mad rush that takes Ivey to the ropes. Ivey recovers from the ropes after receiving Cooper's attack and sends in a few right swings to the head. Cooper comes back strong and they start fighting in clinch. Ivey takes the lead before the gong. Cooper's round.

Fourth Round

Ivey leads fighting at the opening of the round but Cooper comes in for his share when he dodges several severe swings and jabs Ivey with his left. Both fighters start mixing things then clinch. Cooper lands left to jaw on break from clinch and Ivey sends in a series of right overhead jabs to the face and follows up with a swing that Cooper dodges and Ivey falls over the ropes. Ivey misses two more terrific blows and Ivey again lands into the ropes. Cooper lands two right swings to the head and follows with two left jabs. Draw.

Round Five

Ivey takes the jump at the gong and lands two rights to the body but Cooper returns the left straight to the jaw and then repeats three times. Both fighters mix things in clinch. Cooper dodges two severe blows meant for him and then lands a left swing to the body that shows its effect on Ivey. Cooper rushes Ivey to a corner and then sends in a series of rights and lefts to the face and body. Ivey misses a swing and clinches. Cooper lands a left jab before they mix and clinch. Ivey jabs with his left. Cooper's round.

Round Six

Ivey misses his jab on the jump to the ring and they mix with a series of blows. Ivey rushes Cooper to a corner and sends in several blows. Ivey again leads and forces Cooper to a corner with a barrage of blows. Cooper easily dodges two terrific left swings and jabs Ivey with his left. Ivey forces Cooper to a corner. Ivey jabs and sends in blows to abdomen. Ivey jabs and Cooper misses a swing at the gong. Ivey's round.

Round Seven

The fighters exchange blows at the round opening and then clinch. Cooper leads the fighting and successfully dodges two of Ivey's blows. Ivey leads the fight and sends in a terrific right to the face. Ivey again works his short right jab to Cooper's face but Cooper returns with two hard left jabs, and follows Ivey to the ropes with a new burst of speed. Draw.

Round Eight

Cooper opens the round with his left jab to the face and Ivey misses a deadly swing that carries him into the ropes. Both fighters mix and then clinch. Ivey misses another hard blow but recovers to jab Cooper with his right three times in succession. Cooper returns the fight with a series of his left jabs and Ivey mixes things with his right. Ivey continues to send in his hard blows, three in a row and Cooper shows the effect of the attack, staying well under cover and clinching. Ivey's round.

Round Nine

Cooper opens the fighting with a

Round Ten

Both fighters seek a clinch but an exchange of body blows follow. Cooper comes out of a clinch with a right swing that finds Ivey's body. Cooper sends in his left jab to the face. Cooper lands effectively in a clinch. Cooper misses and swings and clinches. Cooper again leads the fighting and both fighters show blood as the final gong sounds. Cooper's round.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally by Drinking Quarts of Good Water.

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of stinging, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Here is where Physical Culture really was useful to Mother

By E. LEIPZIGER

The Truth of It

By MYRA CURTIS LANE
(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

"YES, she's back again, with her husband gone and half her fortune gone, and a little sense in her head at last, I reckon."
"Poor woman, she sure has learned something."
"I should say so. She was a fool to think he wasn't after her money. A man half her age, too."
"Well, we live and learn. She's quite perky about it all."
"Oh, quite!"

The conversation had reference to Adeline Graham, spinster, aged forty-six, with a fortune in her own right. She had married a foreigner, aged twenty-seven, after a brief and ardent wooing. They had gone to his ancestral home in Europe, which, of course, turned out to be a sham, and Adelaide had paid him half her fortune to keep away from her for ever. In her own home Adeline sat musing. She was musing over the events of those three hectic months. And she was not nearly so disillusioned as people supposed.

Why does, how can any woman of forty-eight suppose that a man of about half her age has fallen desperately in love with her? Has it ever occurred to the innocent bystander that the woman, unless she is a fool, is not nearly so disillusioned as is generally thought? Let us listen to these conversations. First, Adeline to her chum, Amy Sturt:

"My dear, I know you think I'm a fool to marry him. But he says he loves me, and the others who have paid me that compliment have all been just as desperate after my money. Why shouldn't I give it a trial?"

"You're so happy now, Adeline, and he'll make you miserable. A foreigner, too."

"I don't see why you should grudge me a little happiness."

"Oh, well, if you put it that way, Adeline—"

Second: Adeline and her suitor:
"Ever since the moment when I set eyes on you first you have been the star in my heart, the light of my ways. I adore you, Adeline. If you won't marry me I shall blow my brains out."
"Do you really care as much as that?"

"I can't live without you."
"Then I will." Adeline was really moved. But underneath something was watching in an amused sort of way. It knew all right.

Third conversation, two months later:

"So this cottage is the ancestral castle?"

"Well, what about it?"

"You seem to have exaggerated things a good deal, that's all." They had come to address each other sarcastically by now.

"You got your bargain—a husband."

"And you got yours—money."

He glared at her. "If you're tired of it I'm quite willing to make arrangements."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Give me enough to live on and I won't trouble you any more. I did care for you in a way, but you can't expect a man to love an old woman of fifty forever. Besides, you'll be sixty soon."

Adeline laughed a bitter little laugh.

"That's the best side of your nature that I've seen as yet," she said.

"How's that?"

"Why, I like you better when you're frank than as a creeping hypocrite. But I don't like you anyway—much. Suppose I give you half my capital—will you agree to a permanent separation?"

He was frightened, he was so eager. He was a little touched, too. "I—I'll agree to that, of course, but—"

"Oh, it's worth it. I got my bargain."

Two months later Adeline was back in America with her maiden name and her diminished fortune. And her chum, Amy Sturt, was sitting with her in her house. Amy didn't say "I told you so." She was a real chum.

"My dear—"

"Oh, don't pity me, Amy. I'm very glad I went through with it all."

"That awful man!"

"I don't know about that, Amy. He wanted my money, but so did the others. And I saw through him all the time, and I knew how it would end. But, you see, I was forty-six, and I wanted the experience of life before I got to be an old woman. Each of us got what he bargained for, and thank heaven, I could afford to pay for my amusement."

He Had His Nourishment.

An old dandy from Georgia was sent to a hospital in Charleston. One of the nurses put a thermometer in his mouth to take his temperature. Presently, when one of the doctors made his rounds, he asked:

"Well, Nathan, how do you feel?"

"I feel right to'ble, boss."

"Have you had any nourishment?"

"Yassir."

"What did you have?"

"A lady done gimme a piece of glass to suck, boss."—Everybody's Magazine.

GIANT TRADE INCREASES THE BELIEF N. Y. CLUB HOLDS INTEREST IN BRAVES

Davey Bancroft reaching for an easy one and Casey Stengel in home run hitting trim.

The recent trade between the New York Giants and Boston Braves strengthens the ever-growing belief that the New York club holds an interest in the Hub team, now run by Christy Mathewson and Barney Fuchs. The Braves, a tail-end club for several seasons, get Dave Bancroft as a playing manager, Home Run Casey Stengel, and Outfielder Bill Cunningham for Outfielder Southworth and Pitcher Joe Oeschger. It seems probable that McGraw could have obtained much more material or dough, had he cared to dispose of the brilliant and brainy shortstop and Stengel to some other club. As it is, the deal goes far toward revamping the rut-ridden Braves.

National Defense Council Of Six Military Leaders Established in Country

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Thru the completion of a reorganization program begun immediately after the World war, the United States at last has a Supreme Council of National Defense which is declared by service experts to be the most efficient ever effected.

And even half dozen officers, three army and three navy men, comprise the council, officially termed the Joint Board. Appointments are all ex-officio, the detail of an officer to a certain bureau carrying with it membership on the board. The present organization includes General John J. Pershing, chief of staff; Major Gen. John L. Hines, deputy chief and the head of the army war plane division, and Brig. Gen. Briant H. Wells, for the land forces, and the chief of naval operations, Admiral E. W. Eberle; the director of war plans of the navy, Rear Admiral W. R. Shoemaker, and the assistant chief of operations, Read Admiral R. H. Jackson, for the navy.

To this board is finally referred every major problem involving the national security, and all items of information and all rumors which may have a remote bearing upon the national defense. The new organization extends in a network over the entire country, having representation in every naval district and army corps area, where officers of the two services meet regularly to discuss the defense of the section under their charge and its relation to the national strategic plan.

The Joint Aeronautical Board has been made virtually an adjunct of the super-council through an order which requires its recommendation to be referred to the higher tribunal. A similar restriction upon the Joint Munitions Board, composed of the assistant secretaries of War and Navy, brings this agency of defense under the same directing control.

An indication of the scope of the new plan is given in the following partial list of subjects recently presented.

Functions and Missions of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

BLOCKS OF HARDING MEMORIAL STAMPS SOUGHT FOR FRAMING

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Blocks of unperforated Harding memorial stamps, in any number up to 400, were placed on sale recently at the Government Philatelic Agency here.

Owing to the demand from collectors, members of Congress and others who desired the unperforated stamps for collection purposes, Postmaster General New gave orders for the preparation of the stamps without perforations. Many of the requests were based on a desire to obtain the stamps in that shape for the purpose of framing in memory of the late president.
